Dare to Excel

HICKORY LOG

PROLOGUE

Sponsored by the LOG Staff, Student Council, and Art Department, a coat of arms contest was held in the spring of 1967. Students were invited to design an appropriate insignia for Hickory High School. Susan Reinhardt was winner of the competition. Her design and those of the second and third place winners were amalgamated into the seal to be used on class rings, diplomas, and school documents. The 1968 Hickory LOG unveils to student body and friends the coat of arms. In the forward pages each part of the seal has been highlighted and explained. The total of its component parts form the coat of arms representing aspects of school life over the motto for this and future school generations, DARE TO EXCEL.

In Academics

Symbolized in the coat of arms by the open book, educational excellence is achieved through academic effort. This year's curriculum was extended to include Consumer Math, Senior Science, Advanced Chemistry, and Advanced Composition and Public Speaking. This expansion provided for the multifaceted needs of the students.

In Sports

Trophy-lined walls provide mute evidence of victories past. For ten years, Hickory's winning tradition in the Western North Carolina High School Athletics Association has been unequalled. Carrying the torch of victory, Tornado athletes in the past year have captured an Association title in tennis, the eleventh consecutive track conference championship, a second undefeated Northwestern Conference football season, and an almost perfect record in Junior Varsity football. Athletic teams have dared and excelled.

In School Spirit

Screams of "We're number one!" pulsate through the night air; pep rallies thunder through aged halls; discordant voices sing "Hail to the Varsity"; a foreigner declares his respect for the school spirit of H.H.S. With a backdrop of surging school support, teams forge to victory. Pride in one's school, its colors of maroon and gold, its songs, its yells, inspires sportsman-like conduct in both champions and losers. The unrelated individuals of Hickory High are bound together in unified esprit de corps. This composite of emotions is the intangible quality which lends our school distinction.

In Citizenship

Besides stressing academics, H.H.S. is a proving ground for teaching principles of democratic living. Conformance to community mores is inculcated into the student body. Students of divergent socio-economic backgrounds are brought together to learn a pattern of behavior which will be acceptable in the present Hickory community and will insure an improved code of ethics for the next generation of Americans.

In Activities

From the pop of paper bag cheers at a football game to the rustle of long formal dresses on a dance floor, activities of Hickory High are as diversified as the individuals who participate in them. From the demanding game of chess to the casual pastime of gardening, our school supplies an opportunity to develop individual interests. Coordinating these activities is the Inter-Club Advisory Council composed of organization presidents and heads of staffs. Through its democratic extracurricular program, H.H.S. enables her students to assume responsibilities, form friendships, and serve the community.

In Honor

The joy of a trophy, the splendor of a crown, the distinction of being one of the select few—this is honor. Honor, however, is not only bestowed on those who succeed, but also on those who show integrity in daily school life. A good sport, a friendly personality, an optimistic attitude are the unsung glories which strengthen the school. Attempting to acknowledge these, H.H.S. elects the Sophomore, Junior, and Senior of the month. Showcases of trophies and certificates symbolize the honor won for Hickory High by its students and are ever present as a reminder of its rich heritage. It is this trait of honor which permeates the entire student body of H.H.S.—an intangible quality in each student.

Spirit of Truth

Each young adult must at some point in his maturation dismiss the fantasies of childhood and begin his search for truth. Instead of blind acceptance he compares the facts and ideals of his environment. Through experiencing human relationships, reading recorded observations, and becoming aware of one's limitations, students face the realities of adulthood. The best of Hickory High's youth exemplify honesty, loyalty, and reliability through their sense of fair play, citizenship, and school spirit.

Dedication

Clicking typewriters, rumbling mimeograph machines, ringing phones, and slamming files surround the activities of our dedicatee. Her patience, cheerfulness, diligence, and understanding are manifested in her daily dealings with students. Serving as chief medicine dispenser and pink slip writer, Mrs. Shuford becomes aware of the character and nature of each individual at Hickory High. She personifies devotion to both the school and her family. Having served H.H.S. for eight years, Mrs. Shuford works closely with Mr. Miller to check truants and out-of-district enrollees. Her perpetual motion amazes all as she answers endless phone calls, prepares absentee reports, acts as visitors' receptionist, and supervises school correspondence. At home, the apples of Mrs. Shuford's eye are three vivacious children and a lively grandson. Overflowing with energy, she is the powerhouse of the managing staff of Hickory High. For deep devotion and willingness to serve, we, the members of the LOG staff, dedicate the 1968 Hickory LOG to you, Mrs. Phyllis Shuford.

SUCCUMBING into a semi-dreamworld, junior Kay Huffman pauses during a study hall encounter with a Steinbeck novel.

Changing with the Times,

ENGLISH

Recognizing the necessity of communication and making itself pliable to the needs of the student, the English department ranked in the top two hundred English departments in the country. Responsible for this rating were its teachers, who used the latest and most effective methods, the best materials, and strongest effort to give their students a thorough background. Four of the teachers traveled as delegates to the annual meeting of the National Council of English Teachers. This year four tracks were developed for more individual help. Students were placed in Honors, College Preparatory, General, or Basic English according to their ability. A new course, Advanced Composition and Public Speaking was begun this year to give a more intense study of creative writing and public speaking than offered through regular English courses.

DAILY AFTER SCHOOL, book discussions offer self enrichment as well as extra credit for English students of Mrs. Allison.

Teachers Employ Advanced Methods and Techniques

ENUNCIATION is found to be an important part of every speech by Martha Kirkland, as she records her voice for self criticism.

ACCOMPANIED by Mr. Propst and Mrs. Rost, Mrs. Allison and Mrs. Wallace return from their teachers' convention in Hawaii.

Lack of Qualified Teachers Terminates Latin I Study

RAPT attention is given by Martha Showfety and James McMahon as they listen to the correct pronunciation of a phrase.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

Developing one of man's oldest and most basic needs, the art of communicating, the foreign language department offered several paths for improvement. Three foreign languages were taught and each had its individual club in which students learned more about the cultures, traditions, and heritage of the peoples speaking the language. Stressing the spoken language as well as the written, the French and Spanish classes had access to the modern language laboratory. By means of an intricate system of electronic devices, students were able to practice speaking while receiving individual or group instruction. Resulting from a shortage of teachers, only Latin II was taught this year. Studied in conjunction with classical mythology and Caesar's writings, the written portion of Latin was emphasized, since no country any longer speaks Latin.

FASCINATING but baffling, French language draws a determined effort at understanding and appreciation from Renee Bright.

TAKING TIME OUT from declensions and conjugations, Sondra Huffman increases her Latin vocabulary with a game of scrabble.

CHRISTMAS TIME at Hickory High finds that "Jingle Bells" has taken on a new sound as Mrs. Yount's classes carol in Latin.

EAGERLY consenting that her back be used to write on, Jan Trivette obtains the address of a German foreign exchange student.

Ancient History Gives Students an Insight into Future

TOP OF THE HOUR finds Mrs. Cilley tuning in her United States History classes to the latest news flash via transistor radio.

SENIORS become dreamers . . . the fortunes of life are revealed to Jenny Wilkinson as she explores the mystery of Wall Street.

VAST amounts of stored data allow students to easily research a topic whether it be drug addiction or 1964's presidential race.

SLY REMARKS from the back row draw Mr. Coyne's attention as he relates the discovery and downfall of the Aztec Civilization.

SOCIAL STUDIES

As the world's population increases daily, also does the need for a better understanding of each other. Through the study of social studies, students were able to gain an insight into other people and their ways. With history as the key to the future, a survey course in World History presented a foundation for daily living. United States History was required of all eleventh graders in the belief that the best place to build our knowledge was from America's heritage. Since all men are fundamentally alike and have the same basic needs and wants, the senior course in Economics and Sociology broadened pupils' views of the world. In Economics, John Keyne's New Economic Theory was discussed and contrasted with the United States' system of capitalism, while Sociology dealt with the direct study of man's reactions and inner nature.

INVESTIGATING the relationship between cultural and geological differences, sociology students compete for use of the globe.

UNDER watchful eyes of the class, Phil Barton finds that he is "all thumbs" while threading a film on democracy in the U. S.

COMPETITION between different classes was the incentive used by Typing I teachers to encourage their students to obtain a higher average of correct words per minute. Mrs. Dale carefully places her third period's symbol on the top of the "tree of honor."

Sound Business Practices Prepare Office Employees

CORRECTING an error, Susan White and Jean Houston discover the difference made by printing with the right side of a stencil.

COMMERCIAL

Preparation for the business world was stressed in all the classes of the commercial department. Through the varied selection of business courses taught, students were able to obtain working knowledge of the machines, methods, practices, and terminology used in their selected fields. In the relatively new Cooperative Office Occupations program, students were given a chance to apply their skills. By attending school for a half day and working for the other half, young office employees got first hand experience at a school supervised job. In the classroom, a general introduction into office procedure was given in Typing I, while Typing II students advanced to the operation of more complicated office machines. For future secretaries and stenographers, Bookkeeping and Shorthand courses developed fluency and accuracy in business skills.

RELYING on modern equipment, typing teachers find themselves in a bind when timed writings are halted by a faulty watch.

WITH the six-weeks closing fast behind them, teachers employ every method to finish averaging grades—including students.

PAPER inserted, books open, and fingers poised, readies students for the teacher's signal of "Go" which starts them on a timed writing where they will battle the clock with hope of making no mistakes and establishing a high number of correct words.

Pure, Applied Mathematics Stress Basic Principles

GRAPHIC illustrations aid students in understanding . . . Nancy Guy retraces her diagram of the inverse sine and cosine functions.

MATH

Automation, mechanization and computerization in today's world require the knowledge of modern mathematical concepts. Designed to more fully cover students' individual needs, both pure and applied phases of math were taught at Hickory High. Contemporary Geometry, Algebra I, and basic math courses provided a sound background for sophomores. For upperclassmen, Algebra II introduced modern techniques, while Algebra III and Advanced Math I and II stressed trigonometry and principles needed by collegebound seniors. Consumer Math, a new course in the H.H.S. curriculum, provided a practical working knowledge of mathematics for students not planning to attend college. Graphing, constructing, and measuring, the mathematics student faced the need to comprehend the arguments behind each fundamental principle.

PROVING to her doubting students that homework is not impossible, Miss Smyre clarifies the range and domain of an inequality.

ADVANCED MATH I and II students, Skipper Smith and Billy Reid, in a sixth period study hall, investigate the complexities of a seemingly twisted loop of paper but what actually is a demonstration of a puzzling concept called the Mobius Loop.

CONSCIOUS of nothing but her effort to make a perfect circle, student Vickie Lail becomes aware that the construction of figures is as much a part of a proof as the theorems, but that the theorems are more easily stated than the figures are drawn.

USING the latest equipment and the foremost in technical knowledge to aid him in his endeavors, William Killian acquires skills that will serve him in the future as he builds, from start to finish, wooden furnishings for the home he will be able to keep.

I.C.T., D.E. AND INDUSTRIAL ARTS

Through the Industrial Cooperative Training and Distributive Education programs, students received the benefit of classroom instruction and on the job training in the same course. In both programs students took academic and job oriented courses for a half day and spent the remainder of the day at a school supervised job. During one required course, students were taught general related skills such as human relations and consumers economics as well as technically related skills. In the D.E. program, which employs its students mainly in the sales field, window displaying and advertising were additionally taught. Another program that gave training in hand skills was Industrial Arts. Future carpenters, architects, and draftsmen took advantage of this department's two divisions, mechanical drawing and woodworking.

ROUGH boards become smooth parts of a bookcase after being properly sanded by the careful but capable hands of Eric LaFone.

MECHANICAL drawing student Robert Rowe finds that a sharpened pencil and a straight edge are his most valuable assets.

Cooperative Work Programs Yield Money and Skills

SUPERVISOR of the D.E. program, Mr. Sigmon carefully reads the reports on his students' achievements at their respective jobs.

STUDENT Lab Technician, Sara Pearson, does a white count on a blood sample at her position with Richard Baker Hospital.

FINE ARTS

Appealing to the aesthetic sense, the fine arts department gave students a chance to vent creative notions and express their inner selves. With three fields in music and one in art, many pupils discovered talents and interests never revealed in the regular curriculum. Through city wide art contests, wall murals, mosaics, and sculptures, aspiring artists displayed their works for constructive criticism. In conjunction with the Art Club, many of the decorations for school sponsored activities were done in art classes. In the music department, the band, orchestra, and chorus were courses which could be pursued from gradeschool to graduation. In statewide contests, the band returned with a rating of excellent while the chorus ranked superior. Breaking the regular routine of practice, the chorus gave several performances during Christmas.

BEETHOVEN'S SYMPHONY depends not only upon Mr. Turbyfill's directing ability but also on his talent as a cello repairman.

Techniques and Technicalities Provide Artistic Quality

REVEALING signs of becoming promising artists, Elaine Guinn and Mark Frye illustrate their imaginative ideas and widespread capabilities by using scraps of paper, glue, and scissors points to create unique and decorative examples of mosaic art work.

CONCEALED behind a curtain of uniforms, music stands, and repair equipment, senior Lee Brandon and junior Bob Bolch retreating to a remote corner of the bandroom and team their efforts and know-how to replace a pad on a clarinet before sixth period.

ASCENDING scales and perfecting harmony serve as preliminary steps for choral members on the path to Mars Hill Workshop.

RECALLING days of sandbox play, Curt Bowman and Ted Cooke use brushes instead of shovels to dabble in this new field of art.

HOLIDAY seasons give homemaking students a chance to express themselves with creative decorations that are inexpensive and beautiful. Connie Spencer puts the last minute touches on a table arrangement that features Rudolf, the Red-Nosed Reindeer.

CHECKING the length of the pattern of the bodice of her dress, senior Lana Sigmon begins a sewing project for Homemaking II.

CONSOLATION does nothing to help the fudge cookies Peggy Hildebran measured for with tablespoons instead of teaspoons.

Physical Conditioning Parallels Homemakers Training

HOMEMAKING AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Whether it be cooking a casserole or sewing a seam, the skills learned in the home economics department were designed to serve future homemakers. Among the phases of instruction included were food preparation, the fabrication of clothing, family management, and home decorations. In the process of learning, pupils prepared hot meals for themselves and made fashionable clothing that they kept and wore.

Physical education is an important part of a person's hygiene. By the use of weights and calisthenics, physical strength was built up while games and sports increased agility and coordination. Under the supervision of two experienced instructors, both boys and girls were able to take part in the physical education program. Through these classes, talent for H.H.S.'s extracurricular sports was discovered and developed.

TIRED muscles and aching joints are not a new feeling for Jimmy Kaller as he completes the last set of ten at the bench press.

KNOWING that it will be their turn next, Mrs. Patterson's physical education class watches with expressions of anxiety and amazement as their classmates attempt a gymnastic stunt that seems impossible from the sidelines, but is easy once executed.

WITH the turn of a screw and an adjustment of the mind, Craig Cushman launches an exploration into the world of paramecium.

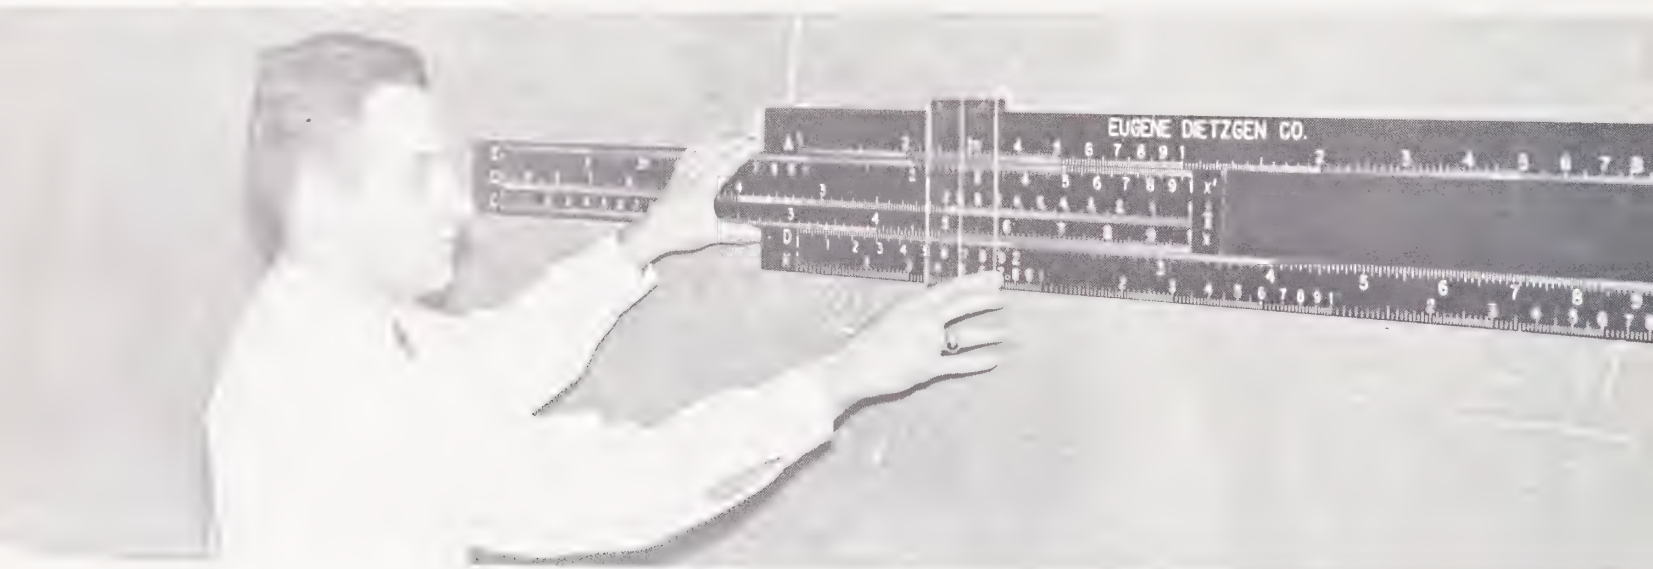

VISIBLE proof of the power and potential of atoms was given to students in demonstrations by the Atomic Energy Commission.

Senior Science, Chemistry II Supplement Curriculum

TEACHING his physics students a shorter method of performing mathematical computations, Mr. Matthew Styers explains the use of the slide rule. Precision and accuracy in moving the slip stick and hairline make the essential difference in finding a cube root.

REPLACING a fallen Arthropoda, Scott Keller contemplates the hours of tedious work employed to fabricate this authentic replica.

SCIENCE

Dissections, distillations, and demonstrations brought the study of science out of the textbook and into actual execution. Both laboratory and lecture phases helped to intensify the investigations of various topics. Beginning with a required course in biology, students were able to discover how and why nature performs her wonders. By investigations with the microscope, controlled experiments, and examinations in the field, a better understanding of the complexities of life was learned. This year Chemistry II was added to the curriculum, allowing a deeper study of matter and its components. Also new was Senior Science, designed for seniors who failed or missed general science in the ninth grade. New textbooks, a larger film library, and added equipment gave the science department more depth and means of transferring its knowledge.

AMMONIA may be foul to many, but to Chemistry II pupils it smells of success after preparation for a controlled experiment.

SOPHOMORE biology students, who habitually make mistakes, are grateful to receive a bit of advice or a helping hand from one of Mrs. Lackey's lab assistants. These assistants are: Denise Mitchell, Gary Martin, Jeanne Swink, William Camp, and Jay Preslar.

General Upkeep – Duty of Lunchroom, Janitorial Staffs

BUSY hands and a pleasant attitude characterize the lunchroom staff, who prepare daily meals to sustain hungry students. I. Mc-

Bride, E. Pearson, D. Price, E. Robinette, K. Cook, E. Williams, E. Harbinson, B. Miller, B. Lawing, B. Suddreth, and E. Nelson.

DISRUPTED from their routine by a LOG photographer, lunchroom workers are cleaning and storing equipment after a meal.

LUNCHROOM AND MAINTENANCE

Employing the best means possible to provide economical and nutritious lunches, the lunchroom staff fed some nine hundred mouths daily. In the process of feeding this collection of students and teachers, the staff did all of the preparation and serving of the food. Supplements of foodstuffs and other commodities from the state government and federal aid to the students on the cost of milk increased the variety of meals served in the lunchroom. While sustaining this standard of quality, the lunchroom upheld the Grade A Sanitation rating. Also helping to keep the school operational was the maintenance crew. Along with sweeping the halls and rooms, keeping heat in the buildings, and attending the restrooms, the maintenance crew assisted with the lunchroom duties. Under their careful supervision, the school functioned properly.

STUDENTS can be messy testifies Marcy Tipps, who uses as proof the large amounts of trash she removes from the grounds.

WITH a little ingenuity and a long-handled broom, Louise Dickson makes the task of dusting locker tops into mere routine.

IN his twenty-third year of service, head custodian, Albert Reed, takes time from his day to answer phone and give information.

Defensive Drivers Share Summertime with Scholars

POSING as cars on a two-lane highway, Winkie Fitz slows down as Mr. Daughtrey pulls out in front, illustrating correct passing.

SUMMER SCHOOL AND DRIVERS TRAINING

Before students become too tightly enthralled in summer's ways, classes were again resumed at H.H.S. For six weeks through June and July, summer school pupils sat through hot classroom hours and labored over a week's homework compressed into one night. As many upcoming sophomores felt the need to complete biology in the summer, there was record attendance of 150 in the biology classes. Whether making up a failed subject or getting extra credit, summer school was an excellent place for self motivated improvement.

In an effort to create mature and responsible drivers, the drivers training instructors did more than teach the mechanics of driving. Through both the classroom and actual driving instruction, emphasis was put on the correct attitude at the wheel. It is this attitude of seriousness that creates the safe driver.

BETWEEN his different sports seasons, Coach Barger doubles as a drivers training instructor. While beginning a session of in-the-car training, Mr. Barger allows his student to practice diagonal parking several times before driving on the streets and highways.

BASIC animal anatomy is revealed for the first time to biology student Ann Coleman as she dissects and labels parts of a frog.

CAREFULLY weighing and measuring facts, summer chemistry students satisfy their intellectual curiosity by experimentation.

TRANSFORMING facts, figures, and statistics of earlier years into the imagined, softly-strummed chords of a guitar, Carl Davis leans back, closes his eyes, and drifts into a peaceful dreamland, leaving summer school and the history of the world far behind.

Honors and Awards Augment Hickory's School Spirit

1967 FOOTBALL AWARDS: Most Valuable, Mark Keasey; Best Blocker, Ronnie Workman; Best Defensive Players, Ronnie Workman, Doug Thompson; Most Improved, John Keck; Highest Scholastic Average, Blair Abee; Sportsmanship Award, Bill Bovender.

REPRESENTING Hickory High for a week of intensive study at Girls' State was Business Manager of the LOG, Jenny Wilkinson.

BOYS' State delegate and also President of the Student Council, Blair Abee checks over a calendar of spring dates and activities.

HONORS AND AWARDS

Exemplifying the youth of today who will become the leaders of tomorrow, Hickory High's students excelled in every aspect. Whether they were civic awards, athletic trophies, or academic commendations, these honors were symbols of excellence, characterizing the young people winning them. The excellence of being ranked as a National Merit Finalist, the excellence of being chosen by the coaches and fellow teammates as worthy of an award, the excellence of being selected to join the elite ranks of Governor's School students, or the excellence of being awarded a stay at a civic workshop were a few of the honors bestowed on deserving students. These students were not extraordinarily gifted, natural athletes, or born hard workers. They were just ordinary members of Hickory High who had a goal to attain and a will to achieve it.

MOMENTS of light conversation make the day seem shorter for Governor's School students, Jeanne Swink and Johnny Miller.

RANKED nationally, Mary McClintock, Jean Bolan, Chandy Greenholt and Johnny Miller were awarded the honor of Merit Finalists.

STUDENT COUNCIL

From battling the chaos of registration to acknowledging applause following the talent show, the Student Council proved itself an organization continually on the move. A workshop at Mars Hill for three members and the sale of ads for football programs pre-empted activities of the school year. Following direction of registration, H.H.S.'s "back-up men" undertook regulation of parking in the Grove and First Methodist Church lot, the sale of football programs, post-game open houses and publication of a bulletin, THE ROOT. In addition to pressures posed by the production of a 62-unit parade, half-time exercises, and Fall Festival Dance for Homecoming, members headed maintenance of printing lunch menus and a program of lending lunch money. As host to 502 ninth graders, Student Council drafted and executed plans for orientation.

VICTORY cries and galvanizing signs renew enthusiasm at open house by recalling tense moments and maneuvers on the gridiron.

A SUMMONS from the principal doesn't always spell trouble; Mr. Miller consults sophomore president M. Collins about bonfire.

INTER-CLUB ADVISORY COUNCIL

With the goal of elimination of all problems confronting school activities, the various club and staff heads of Hickory High united to form the Inter-Club Advisory Council, providing a channel through which all clubs and staffs operated. Presented with the task of synchronizing class assemblies and club meetings, the council aided in correlating school activities. By establishing rigid assembly times and dates, Inter-Club members prevented conflicts in the schedules of club meetings. Another remedy to this problem was the creation of a twenty-minute activity session each morning. Youth Appreciation Week presented Hickory Optimists with the opportunity to recognize Inter-Club members by a special honorary banquet. Assisting with the establishment of rules and regulations for the organization of new clubs, the council strove to better Hickory High extracurricular activities.

HOMEROOM REPRESENTATIVES

Headed by the Student Council Vice-President, the Homeroom Representatives served to relay criticism and suggestions from their own class members to council members of the upper house. Contributions to the school and community plus performance were the prime factors stressed by the representatives as they conducted elections for students of the month. Homeroom Representatives were also charged with the responsibility of Student Council-sponsored elections in their classes. Prefacing the Junior-Senior Prom, junior representatives collected class dues to handle expenses, then joined ranks with Junior Class officers to draft a theme, select a band, and plan and provide refreshments. A vital link in self-government, the Homeroom Representatives thus encouraged interest and participation in school legislation and affairs.

Monitors Relieve Clamor and Confusion in Corridors

"MAKE A HOLE; don't wait for one." Fullback tactics of T. Dicks, bursting into one-way traffic, warrant reproof from T. Penn.

HALL MONITORS

Congestion, shoving, clamor, running, and smoking in the halls—in order to reduce and eventually obliterate these problems, the Hall Monitors "stood guard" at assigned posts in the school's halls and entrances. Excused from classes three minutes prior to the dismissal bell to assume these stations, the monitors served to insure safety and order in H.H.S. corridors during the five-minute intervals between classes. Issuing cautions and directing traffic were duties frequently executed. Also, the names of repeated offenders were included in periodic reports to administration heads. Directed by Principal Miller and the club adviser, the school's faculty selected the Hall Monitors by merit of character and academic rating. Representative of the standards of Hickory High School, Hall Monitors were expected at all times to exemplify good conduct and mutual student respect.

Representatives Rally Parents for Teacher Discussions

P.T.A. REPRESENTATIVES

Elected annually by their homerooms, Parent-Teacher Association Representatives discovered that it was their duty to unify as well as to promote a common public interest between parents, teachers, and students of Hickory High. Among other obligations were the collection of P.T.A. membership dues and notification by telephone of parents concerning scheduled meetings. The first meeting of the year proved to be their largest barrier, as it served as a night of orientation for parents. Stationed near doorways, stairs, and in every hall, the P.T.A. Representatives guided lost and bewildered parents experiencing involvement in the daily routine of their children as they met and talked with teachers. Through the efforts of this group, parents came to a closer and more meaningful understanding of the school, its facilities, and its faculty.

ONCE-FAMILIAR corridors become a maze of gaping room doors as Hickory High parents inquire directions of guide J. Gragg.

ENTERTAINMENT intervals yield chance for primping, qualms, and last-minute tips from Mrs. Baker, director, at beauty contest.

QUILL AND SCROLL SOCIETY

Typewriters clicking and pencils racing set the atmosphere for future journalists of the Beatrice Cobb Chapter of the Quill and Scroll Society as they participated in HICKORY DAILY RECORD Day. Proceeds from the annual beauty pageant financed club projects; a portion of these funds was allotted for purchase of new staff equipment and for sponsoring entries in the Quill and Scroll writing contest, a new venture. Aided by the HICKORY DAILY RECORD, the club awarded scholarships for journalistic study to John Robinette and Robert Guy Little. Other activities included participation in the S.I.P.A. regional convention, arranging lunchroom bulletin boards, and organizing their spring banquet. All efforts of the Quill and Scroll Society were channeled toward promoting journalistic activities, with special emphasis on encouraging students to pursue journalistic careers.

Marshals Anticipate Own Graduation, Sad but Eager

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

ARMED with cards, pen, and snug chair, P. Bost composes personal greetings to overseas servicemen for the club's yule project.

A darkened auditorium and a flaming torch marked the induction of new members into National Honor Society. Upon recognition, each participant was handed a lighted candle, symbolic of the flame of knowledge. This select group merited membership as juniors by a quality point system based on scholarship, leadership and contributions to school. In May, members assisted with graduation exercises as Junior Marshals. Having earned the greatest total number of quality points, Anna Martha Rudisill and Butch Williams were Chief Marshals. During Christmas, the Society contributed and addressed cards containing personal messages to servicemen in Vietnam. Thus, the National Honor Society, with requisites of both academic achievement and participation in school activities, encouraged the well-rounded development of character.

TWIG STAFF

SLAVING sophomore A. Allran interrupts menial duties of typing for a laughing rebuttal to jibes from a domineering senior editor.

Long hours procuring and organizing data, struggling with the vari-typer, and plotting lay-outs provided the student body of Hickory High School with accurate news coverage through THE HICKORY TWIG. Solicited by the business department, funds from the sale of ads and TWIG subscriptions expedited operation. Inclusion of seasonal elections conducted by the staff supplemented interest in this bi-weekly publication; boy and girl with the most Christmas spirit and Valentine sweethearts were two such elections. Newly introduced in 1967 TWIGS were duotone and full-color pictures and favorite teachers, elected by each class. Staff efforts were rewarded when TWIG captured first place honors at National Scholastic Press Association and Southern Interscholastic Press Association and Medalist Award at Columbia University.

LOG

MINUTES lapse into sleepless morning hours as LOG editors D. Huffman and S. Reinhardt proof and perfect final Class section.

Lay-outs were sketched; subscriptions and ads were sold; copy was written and rewritten; pictures were cropped; write-ups were fitted and proofed; and THE HICKORY LOG was at last "put to bed." As a result of energy and post-midnight hours expended by the combined business and editorial departments, the 1967 LOG retained honors of Medalist from Columbia Scholastic Press Association, first place from Southern Interscholastic Press Association, and All-American from National Scholastic Press Association. The 1968 LOG Staff chose to use Hickory High's newly-adopted coat-of-arms as a recurrent motif, setting as its theme the motto, "Dare to Excel"—in academics, in sports, in school spirit, in citizenship, in activities, in honor, and in the spirit of truth. Embodying the essence of H.H.S., this theme served to challenge the performance of the school's student populace.

Student Writing Publication Creates Literary Incentive

LEAVES

Masterpieces of Hickory High's budding Poes and Frosts were made public through the tedious works and many hours of planning by the LEAVES staff. Original poetry, short stories, essays, and book reviews were written by talented Hickory High students and submitted by English teachers. The articles were discussed, polished, fitted, and illustrated by LEAVES staffers for publication. Also confronting the staff was the composition of the Student Directory, which contained the names, addresses, telephone numbers, and schedules of each student. Through the selling of these booklets and plastic yearbook covers and with the solicitation of advertisements from local business firms, finances for the LEAVES were acquired. By urging students to express their opinions and ideas through writing, the LEAVES staff played an important role in stimulating an interest in creative writing at H.H.S.

LEAVES members deliberate the possibilities of a short story while individual opinions are penciled on entry for final approval.

RADIO-TELEVISION STAFF

ON-THE-SPOT rehearsal evokes nervous giggles from G. Martin, S. Raby prior to April debut of Radio Staff's T.V. presentation.

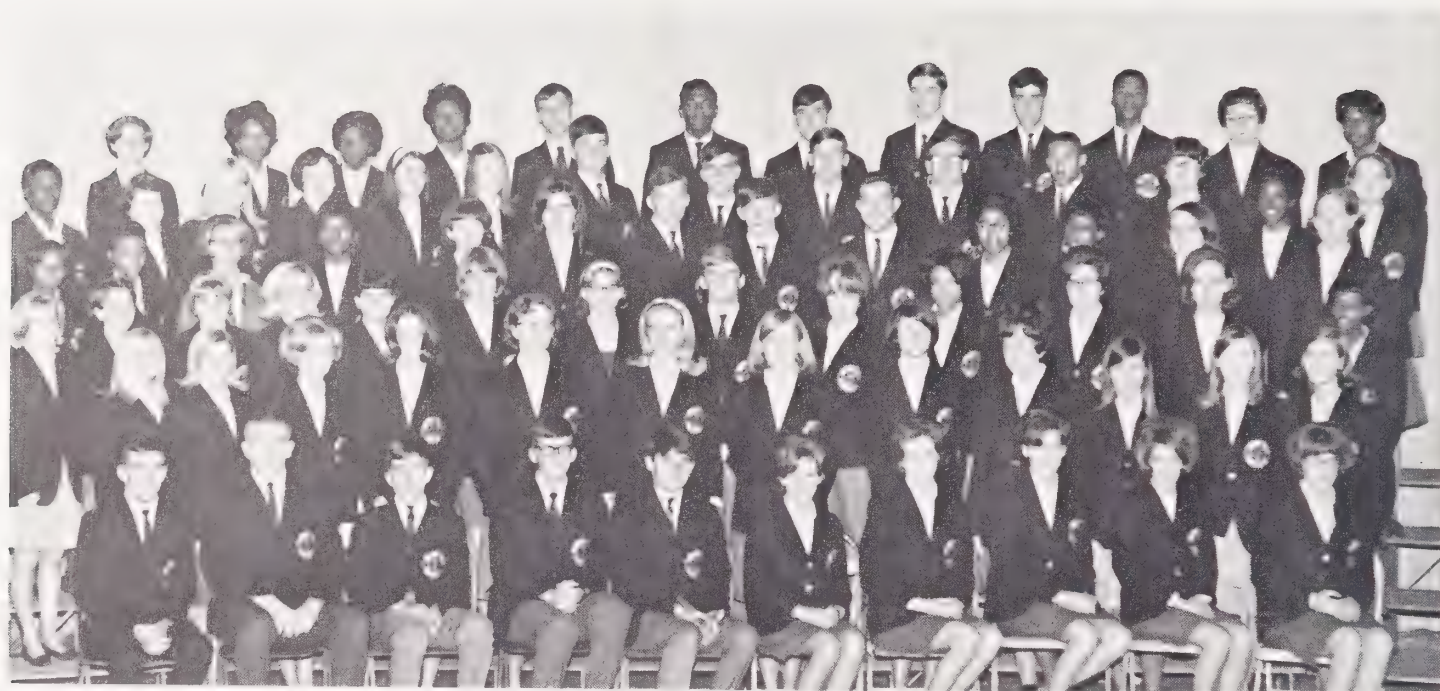

Channel 14's red "On the Air" light flickered; the whirring of cameras resounded in the WHKY television broadcasting room—thus began the premiere of Radio Staff's new addition. "Hickory High Speaks" was piped monthly into Hickory viewers' homes via a fifteen-minute televised program. This routine joined with the weekly WIRC radio broadcast and the school public address system to keep students informed of Hickory High activities. Club funds were contributed by local enterprises in payment for Radio Day advertising. In April, group efforts were rewarded by a first-place rating at S.I.P.A. Meriting honors for outstanding staff contributions, Cindy Shook and Jackie Suther received scholarships to the Radio-Television Institute at Chapel Hill. Upon their return, ideas gained were incorporated to perfect a more entertaining program.

SHAKEN but proud, Radio member C. Shook's aspirations are realized as she accepts a scholarship to the Radio-T.V. Institute.

CHORUS

Drills, workshops, recitals—these served as a means of motivation toward perfection for the chorus members and director. Preparation for the annual Christmas Concert at the City Auditorium was the primary objective of first semester. After this performance, eight students were selected to attend the Mars Hill Choral clinic in February. In addition to the clinic, several members performed at the spring N. C. Choral Festival. Also included in spring activities was the District Choral Contest in Charlotte, where the Chorus received a number one rating, the highest honor for a performing group. At the farewell graduation performance, the National Choral Award was presented to the most well-rounded senior chorus student. Ambitious members continued to pursue their aspirations by attending a summer choral workshop in Chapel Hill.

BAND

In 1967, Tornado football fans viewed an enlarged H.H.S. marching band as required membership swelled its ranks to 128 members, an enrollment record. Half-time pageants featured the flag corps, ten girls carrying multi-colored flags and the majorettes, sporting new uniforms and choreography from summer camp. Designed and built by Mr. Keziah, director, a tympani carriage held kettle drums. Anticipating even greater improvements, the band sponsored a uniform drive for new regalia. The transition from Sousa to Mozart marked the close of the gridiron season. The eight players selected to play in the all-state band in Gastonia and the John Philip Sousa Award recipient were honored for outstanding contributions. In April, the band climaxed its season with an appearance in the All-America City celebration in Hickory, N. C.

ORCHESTRA

Constructive criticism, practice, and finally, perfection was the evolutionary process in which all orchestra members took part. Performances in concerts and school functions gave participants the chance to revive an art of yesterday into the less sophisticated style of music today. Under the influence of perfectionism and determination, each member strove to accomplish rewarding recognition in the All-State Orchestra competition held at East Carolina College. For those who desired to improve technique and skill, a workshop was established at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. In addition to state and local affairs, recognition by the school did not go unwarranted. At the close of the school year, the "Orchestra Student of the Year" award was presented to the most deserving orchestra student who had made the greatest progress and contributions to the honor of the club.

FOLK MUSIC CLUB

Echoes of applause marked the rewarding efforts of the Folk Music Club as it made its entrance into H.H.S. as a new addition this year. Combining individual talents in a group effort, they endeavored to add to the pleasure and entertainment of the public. As a prerequisite to club acceptance, interested students were required to display their talent in an audition. Vocal as well as instrumental artistry played major roles in club composition. As a public service, the group toured local hospitals in a gesture to inspire patients by singing time-honored folk selections and patient requests. Contributing to school functions, the Folk Music Club added variety to the production of the beauty pageant and doubled as entertainment as well as competition in the talent show. Other activities included a hayride and a club-sponsored talent show. Though still in the beginning stages, members have already established the hope to create self-inspired enjoyment and appreciation of music.

FRENCH CLUB

"Un flambeau Jeanette Isabella . . ." Such traditional carols sparked spirits of French Clubbers at a yuletide party. While exchange of French for English was initiated in the classroom through tapes and textbooks, the club provided extracurricular experience in the language. A door-to-door candy sale complemented dues to finance club ventures. For the first time, the French Club undertook production of an International Weekend solely with area college exchangees. In preparation, committees screened and invited guests. In March, members hosted delegates in a small-scale world-wide assembly. Through discussions at this time and continued correspondence with their sister school in Toulouse, France, French Clubbers sought to understand and to be understood, necessities not only for local concerns, but also for improved world relations.

SPANISH CLUB

With the final coat of paint for a stuffed crepe paper bull, the Spanish Club, composed of Spanish II and III students, launched efforts to stimulate interest in the culture and life of Spanish-speaking peoples. As a result of hours of work, the Homecoming parade entry copped third place honors. Intake from a chocolate candy sale plus dues implemented the year's projects. In the spring, seven students merited a summer visit to Mexico. A unique opportunity, the trip offered dividends in both education and enjoyment. As fluency and translation improved and vocabularies expanded, the colorful sights and bull fights of Old Mexico made textbook tales a reality. To promote acquaintance with their southern neighbors in the classroom, a student-planned fiesta, complete with whirling skirts, sombreros, and guitar music, climaxed the year.

LATIN CLUB

Temporarily in the thick of vicious slave trade, Latin Club members ruthlessly bided for choice slave specimens. For Latin I initiates indentured to club members, the initial activity was a presentation of skits to an audience of official Roman citizens. Slave Week encompassed a talent show and daily humiliations and was terminated by a traditional Latin banquet, at which time the slaves were credited full Roman citizenship. In succeeding months, club coffers were incorporated in a contribution to the Elizabeth Reese Memorial Fund and a Christmas party for a group of mentally retarded children at Western Carolina Center in Morganton. Intellect of Latin Clubbers was challenged by a standardized state Latin exam and competition in mythology, derivatives, and Roman history at the N. C. # Activities Answer Appeal of Future Mothers, Models

FUTURE HOMEMAKERS OF AMERICA

Family and home participation comprised the theme of Future Homemaker's group meetings. A sequel of discussions on child care and family relationships encouraged members to improve and perfect home life. The club shared activities with local F.H.A.'ers at a fall district rally in Belmont. Following registration, entertainment featured a fashion show and slides of the national convention which was concluded by the election of state officers. The girls displayed culinary and sewing skills by serving as hostesses at a tea for mothers and modeling homemaking dress projects. With the advent of spring, delegates to the state convention at Raleigh were appointed to acquire and relay new concepts in home economics. As the year waned, surplus funds were donated to the Elizabeth Reese Scholarship Fund and the Holy Angels Nursery of handicapped children in Belmont.

FUTURE TEACHERS OF AMERICA

Through the efforts and labors of Future Teachers of America, prospective educators acknowledged their scholastic and emotional qualifications for entering the field of instruction. During study halls, members gained practical experience by assisting teachers with paper work and filing, thus familiarizing themselves with the tools of the profession. National Education Week set the scene for a tea expressing the school's appreciation for endless endeavors of the teachers to prepare students for the future. May engendered the prospects and preparations for the annual F.T.A. Day. At this time, members assumed the roles of teachers and attempted to meet the standards required in their future career. Afterward, pupils and faculty evaluated each student teacher. Receiving these criticisms, members labored to become successful trainees.

WRITING out a customer receipt and providing quick service, W. Collie demonstrates good salesmanship acquired in D.E.C.A.

Competition among members of the Distributive Education Clubs of America keyed the 1967-'68 school year with contests in job-related fields. Categories of competition were public speaking, ad layout, and sales demonstration. D.E.C.A. Sweetheart, Donna Setzer, also entered statewide competition. With the aid of various businesses, club operation and scholarships were financed by candy and fruit cake sales. At Christmas, the executive committee collected toys for the Empty Stocking Fund and Western Carolina School for the Handicapped. D.E.C.A. members hosted all participating employers at the spring Bosses Banquet, when recognitions and awards were ceded. Through competition, experience, and contact in diversified fields, D.E.C.A. trained its members for positions of leadership in marketing and distribution.

VOCATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CLUBS OF AMERICA

While allowing students to complete their high school education, the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America program assured those not planning to attend college of a "head start" in the business world. By attending morning business classes and working in the afternoon for local business establishments, members gained practical experience in their vocational interests. Assisting with the "Litterbug Campaign," the club painted sand-filled cans for use as ashtrays and placed them at each entrance of the school. Exemplifying the Christmas spirit, a drive was sponsored for food, toys, and clothing to be contributed to a needy family. The V.I.C.A. captured honors in March at the regional convention in Kings Mountain as individual work and group accomplishment was appraised. The year was highlighted by the annual Bosses Banquet, sponsored jointly with the Distributive Education Club.

Cooperation, leadership, initiative, and potential—these were the qualities of citizenship developed by Key Club members. The club president served as delegate to the state convention in Statesville, North Carolina, where representatives were advised as to prescribed club actions for the ensuing year. During the football season, the club sponsored a Hickory High pennant sale. Banners displaying the school colors of garnet and gold were sold at each lunch and at the entrance gate to the football field. This activity, along with the sale of Hickory High stickers for car windows, provided the club with their funds for 1968. Members assisted the Hickory Arts Council and the Heart Fund Drive as a community service. Classified as a builder of exemplary citizenship, Key Club's principal objective remained to serve school and community as individuals as well as an organization.

FUTURE BUSINESS LEADERS OF AMERICA

Into the world of competitive business, the Future Business Leaders of America sends aggressive, ambitious students, driven by desire for competence and self-confidence. In an attempt to cultivate greater efficiency, these prospective leaders met monthly in an idea exchange. At Christmas, members donated toys to the Empty Stocking Fund. In state-wide competition, the Hickory High chapter of F.B.L.A. was credited with a first place award for scrapbook. Representing North Carolina in the national spelling contest in San Francisco, California, in June, 1967, Sherry Roseman copped eighth place. To help with clerical duties, student secretaries were assigned to teachers under the Secretarial Aide Program. For outstanding service, state participation, and merit, F.B.L.A.'ers won the 1967 Hamden Forkner Gold Seal Award.

GARDEN CLUB

Stressing the "Keep America Beautiful" campaign, the Hickory High School Garden Club encouraged students to keep the school campus neat and attractive. Though not one of the more active clubs at Hickory High, the Garden Club fulfilled extracurricular needs of its forty student members as it presented to them a range of hobby possibilities. Monthly meetings and frequent social occasions became creative workshops for ideas. The club chose Christmastime to execute its major project of the year; colorful place mats were designed and contributed to local hospitals to spread seasonal cheer among patients. Litterbug campaigns were planned along with prospective activities for the club. Benefitting both as a club and individually, members approached various aspects of landscaping, flower arranging, and home decoration through speakers, discussions, and demonstrations.

Decorations Depict Mod, Mirrored, Medieval Scenes

ART CLUB

Images of distorted dancers of luminous paint and grotesquely formed letters suspended behind the stage boldly stated the theme, "What's Happ'nin'?" This decor, designed and fashioned by Art Club members, transformed the National Guard Armory into a world of the psychedelic for the Fall Festival Dance. Mirrors advanced a theme of "Reflections of Beauty" at the February beauty pageant. Talent show decorations, as well as trimmings which converted Junior-Senior Prom to a scene from CAMELOT, were also club creations. From decorating for major school functions to maintaining a bulletin board in the administration building, Art Clubbers displayed zest and skill. Superior talent was not a membership requirement, but an aim of members. Diligence and desire, coupled with ingenuity, resulted in attainment of this goal.

DEBATING SOCIETY

Developing felicity before an audience and perfecting the art of public speaking was the goal of the Debating Society. To accomplish their aim, the club chose the control of crime on the national, state, and local levels as the controversial topic. During regular monthly meetings, the theme was carried out by emphasizing the importance of the Supreme Court in crime prevention. Endeavoring to improve debating skills and techniques, they began preparations for the foremost event, the state championship debate at Wake Forest College. The first step to this activity came in the spring when the society competed against regional teams at the district debate. A fall candy sale financed convention trips and purchased debating handbooks. The club's adviser and president were sent to a summer workshop to gain insight into new methods and to acquire topics for future debates.

Conspiring to out-maneuver cunning opponents in the intriguing game of chess, players employed the deadly weapons of checkmate, stalemate, and fool's mate. Such deliberations were not last-minute decisions but the result of months of practice in chess and the art of concentration. Semi-monthly meetings were originators of tactics used during the club's twelve matches. Improving aggressive techniques and furthering common interest in chess, members played with the goal of attending and competing in a spring chess convention. To augment the treasury, members attempted to win the crossword puzzles in the HICKORY DAILY RECORD by combining wits. As a result of the year's activities, Chess Club members developed a worthwhile hobby, polished techniques, and cultivated the power of concentration in a game long enjoyed.

BUS DRIVERS

From overheated engines to slippery roads, the problems dealt with by bus drivers attested to their responsibility and competency. Over routes devised by the faculty adviser, the twelve buses, charged to eighteen student drivers, covered the entire school district. Rising early to check out engines and clean windshields, bus drivers began morning circuits. Daily duties were resumed during sixth period when the drivers traveled to elementary schools for rounds, then back to Hickory High and the two junior high schools for afternoon stops. This group also afforded the school an accessible driver service for field trips. To insure greater safety in the city schools' transportation system, bus drivers, prior to assuming their roles, participated in extensive classroom and behind-the-wheel training conducted by a licensed state instructor.

Students with overdue books were urged to return them on "Forgive and Forget Day" when they would not be charged but greeted with a smile. Hosting at the Southwestern District High School Library Association Convention, library assistants opened the doors of the library to state visitors for examination of books and audio-visual equipment. Morning and afternoon sessions were assembled in the school auditorium, when guest speakers emphasized the value of reading. Mike Keever served as president at the North Carolina High School Library Association in Durham. This was the first year a state president had been chosen from the district. The year was concluded by a leadership planning workshop at Chapel Hill for state president and club adviser.

JUNIOR CIVITAN

"... To bridge the road to better understanding between faculty, sponsor and student..." was the pledge of the newly adopted Junior Civitan Club. October 18, 1967, Charter Night, marked the club's official beginning. Dinner preceded an initiation ceremony. At this time, charter members and officers were recognized, and state official, Wilson Hunt, presented the certification plaque to President Butch Williams. Necessary information concerning Civitan procedure was obtained through a district convention at Lenoir Rhyne College in November. Cushion sales at home football games and fruitcake sales financed a trip for officers to Wild Acres, the Civitan officers' summer camp. Donations of clothing, food, and toys were amassed for a needy family at Christmas. These were the primary activities of this youth organization which struggled to build a finer and nobler citizenship.

Members also supervised parking in the Grove. DeMolay supported the Heart Fund Drive by selling badges and balloons on city streets. By distributing packages at Christmas, the members assisted in the Empty Stocking Fund. Avid sportsmen, the Hickory order won state championships in riflery, softball, and golf. # Life Decomposed to Elements in Lecture to Chemists

CHEMISTRY CLUB

Atoms, elements, molecules—all are factors in today's advanced and highly scientific world. Through microscopes and test tubes, the young, curious student as well as the brilliant scientist could explore this unique and challenging world. In answer to this challenge, the Chemistry Club attempted to develop increased interest in chemistry among students. For the duration of the second semester, the club acquired a new adviser, Mr. Gary Shannon. Monthly meetings featuring speakers and films broadened members' concepts concerning scientific occurrences. In addition, the Chemistry Club attended a lecture at Lenoir Rhyne College delivered by Dr. John Baxter, head of the chemistry department at the University of Florida. Through such extracurricular experience, members learned to apply fact and theory to modern living.

Technological Innovations Spark Engineering Interest

ENGINEERS' CLUB

Acquainting young people with the varied phases of engineering, the Engineers' Club introduced to its members the latest developments in this increasingly vital field. To encourage intellectual pursuit of the "how" and "why" as related to the "what" of science, members observed engineering in action by visits to area industrial plants, guest speakers, and films. An affiliate of the Junior Engineers' Technical Society, the Engineers' Club set a membership record with induction of members in 1967. Emphasizing vocational planning, the club was designed to benefit not only those certain of engineering careers in tomorrow's technological age, but also those faced with the decision of mapping careers. Also catered to were those students desiring extracurricular experience to complement advanced mathematics and physics courses.

VARSITY CHEERLEADERS

Leadership and an outgoing personality were the qualifications of an enthusiastic cheerleader. This year, the varsity cheerleaders were joined by the junior varsity squad to promote school spirit. Pep rallies being the prime source of enthusiasm, skits supplemented regular pep cheers of the cheerleaders. These skits were frequently satirical but were symbolic of the game, coaches, or team members. Another approach used to boost students' morale was a monthly bonfire including a pep band and victory cheers. The girls were also responsible for the poster game reminders at various localities in the halls and for raising the flag each day. During the summer, varsity cheerleaders attended Camp Farrar at Virginia Beach, Virginia, where they were presented the opportunity to improve cheering techniques and to learn modern cheers.

Practice, practice, practice—this was the common endeavor that earned letters for H.H.S. athletes, cheerleaders, and team managers, entitling them to membership in Lettermen's Club. New to Hickory High's curriculum this year, the Lettermen's Club promoted interest in interscholastic sports both in the school and community. As a stimulus to community spirit, reserve season tickets for home football games were sold by members, lessening the probability of long ticket lines and providing choice seats. On game days, regular tickets, also, were available from Lettermen in the school office. By ushering in the reserve seat section and discouraging any undesirable behavior of spectators, club members helped to make games more enjoyable. In addition to supplementing the club treasury, the sale of buttons and shakers heartened team members and boosted student morale.

AMERICAN FIELD SERVICE CLUB

Recognized as a new addition to Hickory High activities, the American Field Service Club presented a foreign flavor to the school. Assisting with Hickory's exchange program, members aided A.F.S. student, Ensor Transfeldt, exchangee from South Africa, by acquainting him with the school and its students. A past duty of the French Club, A.F.S. Weekend became the club's first responsibility. Individual members provided temporary homes for out-of-state exchangees. A reception and open house preceding a panel discussion comprised visiting students' program. As A.F.S. became a more active part of the school and community, members realized their service ranged farther than the locality. The central purpose of the club was to serve as a link between people of different worlds and to promote peace and benign foreign relations.

COACHES

NORTH CAROLINA'S WINNINGEST football coach, Frank Barger, plans offensive strategy with quarterback Roger Gilliam.

Stepping from the classroom to an athletic field or gymnasium, the coaches of Hickory High School represented a dedicated group of men. After-school hours were spent developing the individual athlete in addition to producing championship teams. Hickory High's limited athletic facilities placed added burdens on the seven men, as practice sessions at Lenoir Rhyne were impossible. Included in the coaches' repertoire is the unheralded task of cutting their squads and instructing their students on playing procedure in preparation for the initial contest. Offering advice and inspiration, the coaches tried to maintain the balance between aggressiveness and good sportsmanship in their players, while still maintaining the Hickory High winning tradition. The coaching staff suffered a great loss with the resignation of Coach Jim Garrett, whose Junior Varsity basketball squads compiled a fantastic 175-11 win-loss record during his tenure as head coach.

FOOTBALL

Sparked by a reliable offense and stabilized by a rugged defense, Hickory earned their second consecutive Northwestern Conference championship and extended their string of successive league victories to 21. The Tornadoes dropped the season opener to Gastonia Ashley but improved rapidly to vanquish all conference opponents with comparative ease prior to the encounter with unbeaten Newton. In a dramatic intra-county showdown for the conference title, the Tornadoes rode a magnificent defense spearheaded by Ronnie Workman and Doug Thompson to a 12-7 victory. In the Bi-Conference playoff with Lincolnton, a comeback led by Mark Keasey's running erased an early deficit and ended with Roger Shoffner's apparent game-winning field goal. Seconds later, Hickory watched in total disbelief, as Lincolnton countered with a 44-yard 3-pointer to win, 31-30, ending Hickory's title hopes.

CONFRONTED WITH a rare tract of open field, Most Valuable Player Mark Keasey accelerates in unaccustomed running room.

Showdown Spectacle Ends in 12-7 Tornado Triumph

"BEAT NEWTON!"—Hickory's watchword for five weeks appeared on the wall of the science building as the climactic Friday neared. The Red Devils became Hickory's main obstacle for the title when they stunned Wilkes, setting up the super-showdown.

FOOTBALL

The Catawba County "Game of the Century" was the billing given the Hickory-Newton confrontation for the Northwestern championship. Never before in the county's athletic history had these two teams decided the championship between themselves on the final night of the season. Newton, ignored in pre-season predictions, became the cinderella team of the conference by conquering all foes prior to the Hickory match, and was favored to defeat the Tornadoes. Newton scored first, early in the game, on an interception by Ronnie Copening and a subsequent touchdown drive. After this score, the Red Devils could muster no offense as the Hickory defense proved immobile. The Tornado forward wall opened holes in the Newton line, allowing Bruce Duke to tally the tying touchdown. The winning score came late in the final quarter, climaxing a dramatic Tornado comeback.

CHERISHED CLIPPING of '67 season—the exciting account of the Catawba County conflict for the conference crown rates as

J. V. FOOTBALL

Though suffering the loss of three outstanding backs to the varsity, Hickory High's Junior Varsity won impressive victories over eight opponents before bowing to Ashley High of Gastonia in their final contest. Two easy victories over Fred T. Foard and Taylorsville preceded an important match with perennial powerhouse, Asheville Lee Edwards. Exhibiting prowess worthy of their varsity counterparts, the Junior Tornadoes emerged victorious, 27-13. In the following three games with Morganton, Hudson, and Wilkes Central, the sophomore defense, led by Thomas Penn and Jimmie MacMahan, limited the opposition to a total of three touchdowns while the offense amassed twenty-two. The Junior Varsity squad began the final third of its schedule with victories over Watauga and Morganton. However, the Ashley Green Wave was too powerful, administering the Tornadoes their only defeat, 33-0.

Climaxing their final year in the Northwestern Conference with the tournament championship, Coach Mark Lyerly's charges, enjoying their best season in three years, advanced to the Western Conference Tournament finals before bowing to unbeaten Kings Mountain. Compensating for a lack of height with speed and an all-court press, the potent Tornado offense, with leading scorer Gary Stafford, averaged 60 points per contest. All-Conference Mike McCall and T. C. Covington manned the backcourt positions while Co-Captain Gary Lawson and Joe Thomason handled the inside duties. Three and four overtime losses to Marion and Morganton added bitterness to the unusual defeats. Hickory finished the season with a ten game winning streak that carried them to the Northwestern Conference Championship before dropping a 75-60 decision to Kings Mountain on the Mounties' home court.

Three Red Tornadoettes Rate All-Conference Squad

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

BREAKING HER OPPONENT'S zone defense, Marilyn Fleetwood demonstrates the effectiveness of the Red Tornadoettes' offense.

Speed, adept ball handling, and an aggressive team effort merited the Tornadoettes an 11-7 conference, and 13-9 overall record. Leading scorer was junior Sharon Houston, who hit the nets for a 9.5 season average. Senior rover and playmaker, Tina Mauldin, ranked second in scoring, followed closely by Marilyn Fleetwood, another senior rover. Stationed at center forward, junior Kay Huffman handled offensive rebounding. Defensive responsibilities rested heavily on guards Jamie Munday and Susan Keller, who responded with numerous steals and blocks. The Tornadoettes placed three players—Houston, Mauldin, and Munday—on the All-Conference squad. Entering tournament play in fifth position, the Tornadoettes overcame Valdese by 33-27. In the semi-finals, Hickory tangled with once-beaten Morganton and were eliminated after an exciting, close contest.

Capturing their second consecutive conference championship, the Junior Varsity Tornadoes completed eighteen cage clashes without a defeat. Compiling his usual high scoring team, Coach Jim Garrett guided the sophomore cagers to overwhelming victories over all their opponents. Forward Dave Miller copped the scoring title with a 20.0 scoring average. Center Charles Lehman dominated the boards prior to breaking a wrist, which sidelined him midway during the season. David Williams and Robbie Williams ably filled the rebounding gap. Guards Chuck Munday and Robbie Reed spearheaded the blistering sophomore fast break. Reserves saw extensive action as Coach Garrett allowed as many players as possible gain game experience. The J. ## Grapplers Gain Valuable Experience in Initial Season

ATTEMPTING a takedown, senior Garth Bisette seeks victory in the 98-105 pound division during the East Rutherford match.

WRESTLING

In the initial season of Hickory High wrestling, Coach William Coyne laid the foundation essential in establishing a successful program. The matmen scored only one victory during the season, over East Rutherford, 29-28, and finished eighteenth in a nineteen-team field in the tournaments. However, because the team consisted almost entirely of underclassmen, invaluable experience was gained. A chronological evaluation of the results of the matches reflects the steady improvement of the team. Leading grapplers for the season were Co-Captains John Brock and R. L. Lail, and Wayne Drum. Brock and Garth Bisette earned the Tornado points in the WNCHSAA tournaments held at Salisbury. One of the squad's outstanding features was the high morale maintained among the team members, demonstrating the team's realization that this year's losses could become next year's wins.

Golfers Rank Third Despite Lack of Practice Course

DRIVING TOWARD the seventeenth green at the Boone Country Club, Phil Friday eyes the flag and victory for the Tornadoes.

GOLF

Despite limited access to a practice course, Hickory's golfers stroked themselves to a successful season. The closing of the Lake Hickory Country Club discouraged team members from carding practice rounds. However, Hickory managed five seconds and three thirds in its eight matches, including a third place in the conference match held at Boone. Consistent low scorers throughout the season, Bill Johnson, Phil Friday, Gene Brooks and John Bost stroked the lowest team score recorded by a Hickory squad in five years, a 318. One of these scores was Johnson's 76, the best individual score in two years. Johnson and Friday scored low enough in the conference meet to represent the Tornado squad in the Association match held at Albemarle. Overcoming the many problems that plagued them through the spring, the Hickory golf team emerged with a third place conference finish.

TENNIS

By virtue of a victory on the part of Hickory's number one team in the doubles competition, the H.H.S. tennis team captured the WNCHSAA championship in the Association tournament at Pfeiffer College. Returning to tennis prominence after a rebuilding year, the Tornado netters compiled a 10-2 record. Balance proved to be the forte of the squad as each player earned a winning individual record. Paced by the team's three seniors, Steve Hemphill, Duffie Lutz, and Jimmy Brown, Hickory outpointed its opponents on the year 87-21. Brown compiled a 22-0 record in singles play during a two year span. Half of the Tornado victories were of the shutout variety, as they suffered setbacks only at the hands of Shelby. However, by strategic arrangement of his players by Coach Jack Daughtrey, Hickory avenged their previous losses by defeating the Shelby Lions for the Association crown.

Despite capturing their eleventh consecutive Northwestern Conference championship, the spring of 1967 proved to be a season second bests for the Tornado thinclads. Hickory earned the runner-up spot in five of their seven meets, including a third place in the championship contest. However, the Tornado cinder-men gained some consolation by outpointing Shelby, victors over the Tornadoes in three previous meets. Leading the Tornadoes in scoring was Dennis Abernathy, who set Bi-conference records in the pole vault and triple jump events. Senior John Thompson established a new conference mark in the shot-put, while the Tornado mile relay team set a new Association record. Sophomore miler Mike Kaylor captured first place honors twice during the season. Nevertheless, Hickory fell victim to perennial WNCHSAA power, North Rowan, in the Association meet at Kannapolis.

Tornadoes Lose to Wilkes

BASEBALL

The close of an exciting season of Northwestern Conference baseball found Coach Mark Lyerly's charges trailing Wilkes Central in a two team race for the league crown. However, the season had its bright spots as the Tornadoes used power and speed to propel them to a 12-2 season mark. Backed by a sound defense, the Tornado mound staff, boasting two unbeaten pitchers, held opponents to less than four runs per game. Hickory scored impressive victories early in the season before encountering Wilkes Central. Against the Eagles, the usually potent Tornado bats fell silent to the mastery of Eagle hurler, Ken Brooks. This situation was repeated one week later in a conference game which cost the Tornadoes the Northwestern crown. Although Hickory closed the season with eight consecutive wins, Wilkes Central proved invincible, and the Tornadoes finished in second place.

"WHICH WAY DO I GO?" is the familiar question asked by sophomores on their first excursion at Hickory High School.

Notebooks, pens, and pencils, replacing summer equipment of sandals and suntan lotion, became the constant companions of H.H.S. students as they returned from a summer of leisure to hectic school life. For sophomores, high school life meant leaving behind childhood and striving for higher goals. Juniors, as middlemen, gained and gave respect. Seniors anticipated the moment of their graduation. Chaos reigned as schedules were changed, and teachers attempted to associate names in a flood of faces. Order replaced pandemonium as students returned to familiar routines. Football games, homework, monthly meetings—all of these became the activities around which the student centered his time. Once again he functioned, not only as an individual, but also as a contributing unit to the whole of Hickory High.

FOR A.F.S.'er Ensor Transfeldt, post-game activities provide a refreshing snack and a chance to talk over highlights of game.

ANTICIPATING a career in medicine, Ensor finds concentration a necessary ingredient in tackling the complexities of chemistry.

SURROUNDED BY enthusiastic spectators, a crackling bonfire invests "fiery spirit" into hopeful anticipators of a victory.

DISPLAYING another contribution to the school, Jan Spurlock also represented H.H.S. in the Charlotte Carrousel Parade.

SHORT SKIRTS, fashionable this year, can sometimes prove hazardous. Sally Norton dances, unaware that her slip is showing.

Fall embodied the aroma of burning leaves, daring fads, invigorating weather, and readjustment to the regular and normal pattern of school life at Hickory High. Behind it was the exhausting job of battling registration. In front was an adventure-packed season. Reading and absorbing facts once more assumed a prominent position in the life of the Hickory High student. As school activities resumed vibrancy, social life became more colorful and exciting. The unprecedented Fall Festival Dance was held in October, featuring a local band, the Jokers and Marlboros. The football kickoff, blazing bonfires, and pep rallies guided the student body toward one objective—support of an eleven man squad determined to achieve victory on the gridiron. And as time slipped away, the messenger of winter and terminator of summer was gone.

COLLEGE Night readily answered questions and problems faced by both parent and student as they prepare for years ahead.

A PAUSE—a stare—a sudden change of expression: Regina Robinson and Allan Maddox require no words to speak to each other.

Autumn Leaves Reflect Hues of Bright H. H. S. Colors

CHEERLEADERS OF the '67 squad, with confident smiles, vivacious yells, and garnet and gold shakers, lead the H.H.S.

Tornadoes through the canvassed goal post, across the gridiron, and on to victory, resulting in the title of "conference champs."

ADDING extra dash and spangle to the parade, the newly formed Flag Corps marched tirelessly throughout downtown Hickory.

Parades, Bonfires, and

Showers of ashes and shouts of cheer initiated the 1967 Homecoming weekend. A blaze from a large mountain of boxes was background for the bonfire and pep rally. Later, students found themselves engulfed by napkins and wire striving to complete the floats in time for the Homecoming parade. The day wore on, the sun sank, and students looked with anticipation to the game and half-time festivities that night. Included in these festivities were sponsors and their escorts, Maid of Honor Jan Spurlock, crown-bearer Cynthia Lyerly, and finally Miss Tina Mauldin, 1967 Homecoming Queen. After Tina was crowned, the festivities closed with a kiss from Blair Abee, Student Council President. Homecoming ended on a note of victory as the Red Tornadoes defeated the Hudson Hornets.

HOPING THAT practice will alleviate pre-game anxieties, Homecoming sponsors and escorts rehearse half-time presentation.

PLANNING Homecoming and leading the team to victory was the dual job of T. Bynum, C. Helms, B. Abee, and A. Drumheller.

THROUGH the French Club's float, the buoyant enthusiasm of H.H.S. students during Homecoming festivities was exemplified.

THE RED TORNADO basketball team is spurred onto victory by the participation and sportsmanship of the enthusiastic crowds and vivacious cheerleaders. Strains of the familiar and popular cheer, "Well, No!" reverberate throughout the Shuford Gym.

Students' Studies Slack as Joy Season Approaches

DURING the transitional season from fall to winter, H.H.S. sports fans begin popularizing the hard court as opposed to gridiron.

ANTICIPATING life as a Carolina co-ed, Nancy Guy muses the future as she adds her name to the college admissions book.

A TESTIMONIAL to confusion, telltale footsteps punctuate the silence of empty classrooms and retreat into still white oblivion.

Winter was not to be denied a starring role in the life of H.H.S.'ers. Basketball season was first to catch the eye of loyal Tornados as a string of early victories aroused school spirit and provided bi-weekly entertainment. The games, coupled with Christmas vacation, added color and excitement to dismal winter days. Red-nosed and rosy-cheeked students sought jobs to supplement meager funds for shopping. With the approach of the holiday season, books were pushed aside, giving way to the leisurely days of vacation. Hopeful eyes glanced to the sky, but a "White Christmas" was not included on the winter calendar. Returning to school after ringing in the new year, students braced themselves for the biting cold and grueling exams that lay ahead in the remaining months of winter.

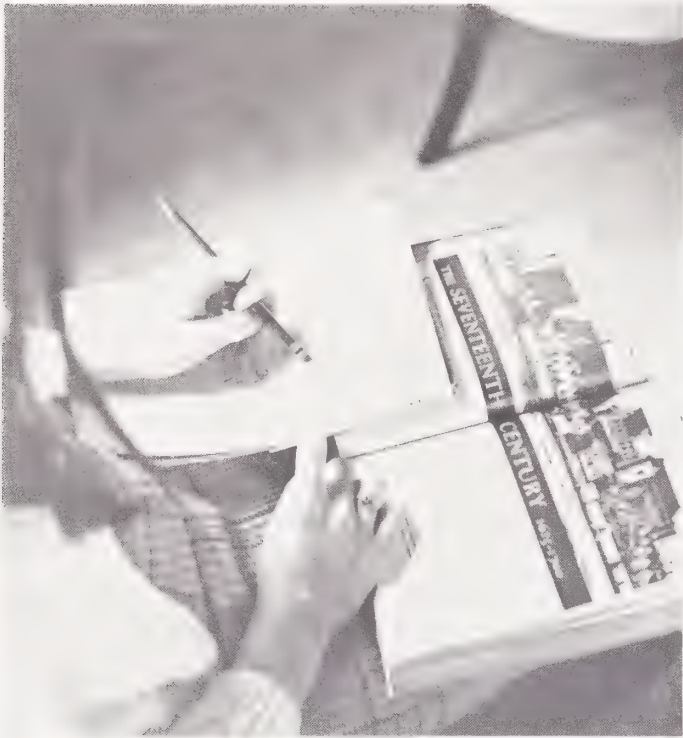

LUNCH PERIOD offers a midday break as Mike Hewat sacrifices nourishment for a popular pastime—female companionship.

AFTER A PROLONGED ABSENCE from Hickory High, students return only to find the "Grove" a gigantic sheet of slush. Due to heavy mid-winter snowfalls, even cars using chains and snow tires are found to be susceptible to frozen mud and ice.

Moist Hands and Dry Brains Equal Semester Exams

LAST MINUTE CRAMMING for semester exams is hardly the proper substitute for one-half year's worth of daily preparation.

As the middle of the school year came into focus and the third six weeks dwindled into mere minutes, students were finally faced with the seemingly insurmountable semesters. At the beginning of the year, preparations consisted of concrete resolutions of daily work and hard studying; yet these plans crumbled under the distractions of football games, pep rallies, Christmas holidays, and parties. However, as the future dissolved into the present, prospects of the dreaded semesters petrified pupils to such an extent that last minute reviewing and empty "No-Doze" boxes prevailed. Late into the night, they attempted their bi-annual chore of cramming four and a half months into a few hours. The following morning sleepy-eyed students took last minute peeks into a wrinkled book, resolving again to do better in the coming year.

THE FINAL MOMENT of testing has finally arrived for dreading students. After struggling through ten trips to the water fountain, four pencils, a pack of paper, and a two and one-half hour exam, students emerge, exhausted but somewhat relieved.

HAPPINESS FOR Beth Earnest is finishing her semester exams with the secure feeling that she has passed with flying colors.

REFRESHING HER MIND and gaining her composure, L. Hartman prepares for the uncherished task of taking semester exams.

THE ONLY REWARD bestowed upon H.H.S. students for enduring their long semester exams is an open lunch period for seniors and sophomores alike. At eleven thirty, students swarm the "Grove" and scatter to nearby drive-ins for hamburger and Coke.

SPRING BRINGS convertibles, cotton dresses, warm weather, beach fever, daisies, suntans, gentle rains, LOG Day, and finals.

ON SATURDAY MORNING, the lazy sleep. However, the energetic students who take pride in the cleanliness of their school, pause after braving early hours to participate in H.H.S.'s "Clean-

TEACHERS EMPLOY study hall students to aid in the washing of windows, thus completing the annual "spring cleaning."

Up and Fix-Up Day" part of the "Keep America Beautiful" campaign.

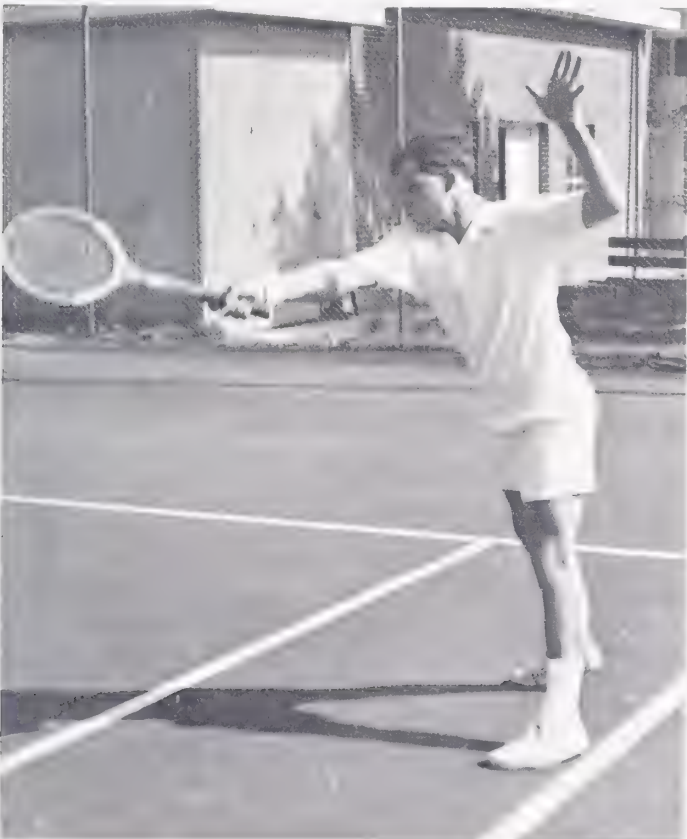

AS SPRING INVADES HICKORY HIGH, students' minds wander from books and blackboards to sandy beaches. Andi Blackwelder, Jean Heafner, and Dianne Walter discuss with their chaperone, Mrs. Walter, their plans for the annual houseparty.

"Spring Fever" Blossoms While Thermometer Soars

IN ACCORDANCE WITH its warm weather, Spring revives an interest in such outdoor sports as track, baseball, golf, and tennis.

Old Man Winter made his rapid exit from H.H.S. as swiftly as the elements he influenced when spring suddenly burst in on the scene with annually anticipated sensations. Neglected trees began to sprout new green leaves, and flowers blossomed as Mother Nature clothed them once more in their distinct beauty. Gone were the exciting sled rides, snowball fights, and unexpected holidays, taken over by the new prospects of a fun-filled Easter vacation and walking barefoot in sun-warmed grass. Jack Frost's red noses were traded in for premature sunburns as the beginning of spring brought out sunlamps for early tanners. Sparks of spring fever kindled new romances and replaced books with tennis rackets and water skis. Unmistakenly, spring WAS H.H.S.—the mood, the time, and the elements.

"TRAFFIC STOPPERS," otherwise known as Latin Club initiates, spend a week obeying all whims and wishes of their master.

THE "PIRATE'S COVE" created an imaginative atmosphere for the Jr.-Sr. Prom. "Pirate" Roger Hall, escorting his "lady-fair"

Phyllis Robbins, exercise this advantage as they improvise their own dance steps and compose an unusual and original routine.

Creative Atmosphere Awes Buccaneers and Damsels

JUNIOR-SENIOR embodies friends, fun, music, dancing, parties, tuxedos, long evening dresses, fancy hair-dos, and refreshments.

Flowers, dresses, dinner, and dancing composed the grandeur and atmosphere created by the 1967 Junior-Senior Prom. Sponsored by the Junior class and given in honor of the Seniors, the prom provided students with a welcomed relief from the pressures of studies. Agonizing hours beside the phone for girls were equally coupled by the fear of refusal and timidity on the part of boys. Yet as dates were made, slow transformations progressed. Crash diets, the breaking in of new shoes, jaunts to the barber shop and beauty parlor, and the renting of tuxedos became time consuming efforts as the eventful evening approached. Later, amid dancing and music, Seniors Billy Goodman and Gail Golden were crowned King and Queen of the prom, thus climaxing the 1967 Junior-Senior.

MOST COUPLES ATTENDING Junior-Senior include dining out on the agenda for the long-awaited night. Stephanie Phillips smiles as she contemplates the delicious menu and Cameron Burns. However, after dinner, there is music, dancing, and fun.

H.H.S. Art Clubbers accept the responsibility of transforming the Armory into a "Pirate's Cove" as the Jr.-Sr. Prom materializes.

MARIA PALADINI finds herself entwined not only in the decorations, but also in memories that she will carry back to Argentina.

Roses, a Royal Tiara Inaugurate a New Miss H. H. S.

Glitter from a royal tiara added sparkle to a new and glowing Beauty Queen, Miss Tina Baker. Concentrating on perfect turns and constant smiles, sixty-five lovely girls were presented to judges Mr. and Mrs. Hack Tyson, Mr. and Mrs. Dan K. Moore, Jr., and Mr. Charles Deal. Capturing the festive atmosphere of Valentine's Day, bright paper hearts and golden cupids carried out the theme of "Festival of Hearts." Each homeroom "sweetheart" carried a gold, glittered heart displaying her number. A single rose, later to be the only tangible evidence of the ten finalists' moments of glory, was presented to each girl. Second runner-up was Miss Jean Short; first runner-up, Miss Jan Spurlock. Flashing cameras and explosive applause were the grand finale of the 1967 Beauty Contest.

BACKSTAGE CONFUSION PREVAILS between acts of the 1967 Talent Show as Student Council Representatives Steve Hemphill, Terry Bynum, and Gary Stafford wrestle a grand piano, carrying out one of their many duties as stagehands and sponsors.

PARTICIPATING in the H.H.S. Talent Show, William Connor captivates the audience by imitating a favorite comedian, Bill Cosby.

A TALENT ABOVE and beyond her artistic ballet dancing is needed by participant Ronda Key as she prepares for talent show.

AMPLIFIED SOUL SOUNDS excite the talent show audience as the Thompson group presents Tams and Temptations recordings.

Butterflies backstage, tense excitement, last minute tunings, and the anticipation of an awaiting audience served as preliminaries of the 1966-67 talent show. Coinciding with the theme of "High Talent," students revealed disguised abilities in popular, traditional, and classical fields. As well as entertainment, participants performed with the goal of receiving a coveted first place. Attaining this goal were a six member combo, a group of folk singers, and pianist Chandy Greenholt, in the popular, traditional, and classical areas, respectively. For others, invaluable experience was gained from continual practicing and actual participation. A popular musical group, the Sounds of Soul, served as an added effect during the judges' decisions and helped create the perfect atmosphere for the revealing of talent.

THE SOFT STRUMMING of M. Warlick and R. Suther's guitars accompany the rest of the group's version of a new folk song.

Graduation — Overwhelming Joy Tinged With Sadness

I am the class of 1967. I came to Hickory High three years ago from a small junior high school. Awed by the buildings, pink slips, laborious assignments, Geometry, and seniors, I was fast becoming a part of H.H.S. Then suddenly I was a junior—and, I suppose, wise but foolish. No longer afraid, but rather self-confident, I watched the sophomores approach much as I had the year before. That year I entered the social life of H.H.S. I joined clubs, entered the Beauty Contest and Talent Show and went to Jr.-Sr. And now with required courses taken, deadlines met, and term papers written, I am ready to leave Hickory High behind. No, never behind, for more than I have become a part of H.H.S., H.H.S. has become a part of me. I am the class of 1967, and I am ready for tomorrow.

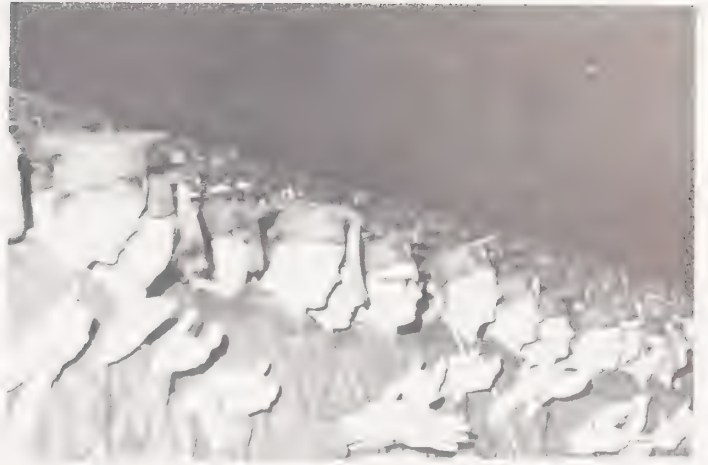

A HANDSHAKE, a diploma, a laugh, a tear, a gratifying past, unfocused future—Hickory High graduates her 1967 Senior Class.

SENIOR HOMEROOM TEACHER, Mrs. Jane Turner, measures a countless number of heads to obtain sizes for graduation caps.

ROWS of robed seniors anxiously anticipate the moment when a single ribboned scroll will declare the end of twelve years' work.

TWO SENIORS—nostalgically clinging to Hickory High and its spirit, honor, and traditions—ready to graduate from youths to adults—reluctant to abandon the carefree school days and enter the tension-filled world of responsibilities and hard work.

Miller Offers Recommendations for New High School

CONFERRING with Ass't. Principal Mr. Washam, Mr. Miller checks bus mileage reports and upcoming drivers' training courses.

DYNAMIC, FRIENDLY, RESPECTED—such is the profile of Mr. Miller whose every decision affects the future of Hickory High.

A competent administrator, patient adviser, understanding friend—all are synonyms for the H.H.S. Principal B. E. Miller. Serving his second year at Hickory High, Mr. Miller had as his main task the preparation of final reports on the exact needs and requirements of the new school. In addition, Mr. Miller was beset by innumerable trivial and important problems each day throughout the year; however, he was still able to find time to be a colleague and friend to student and teacher. By forming this close association, he helped teachers solve their varied problems while carefully considering the suggestions offered by them for improving the school and curriculum. Students also benefitted from his friendly attitude and youthful spirit. With intelligence and experience, Mr. Miller made decisions which were of vital concern to students, parents, teachers, and the entire community.

AMID endless piles of work, Mr. Miller searches for a pen to complete reports on specifications for the new high school.

A CUP OF COFFEE and a piece of cake allow Mr. Miller a chance to relax his mind, refresh his spirit, and refill his stomach.

Progress for Old, Plans for New Keep Board Active

AS THE COMMOTION of College Night ends, Dr. Wishon and Mrs. Turpin find a relief in the quietness of the deserted lunchroom.

ARMED with facts and figures, Mr. Hewitt, the business manager, plans future financial aspects of the Hickory City Schools.

Assisted by Principal B. E. Miller and the teachers of Hickory High, the Hickory School Board, after a year of intensive work, completed plans for the proposed H.H.S. campus. Construction of the new high school was scheduled to begin in the near future. Hours of work were rewarded in the openings of the newly built W. M. Jenkins Elementary School and the modernized Oakwood Elementary School. Also confronting the Board was the question of whether H.H.S. should join a 4-A athletic conference. Following the retirement of the late Dr. W. M. Jenkins, the Board was compelled to choose a new superintendent. Now filling this office is Dr. J. H. Wishon, who previously served as superintendent in Rockingham, N. C. When faced with a controversial issue, the School Board discussed the problem and arrived at a conclusion directed toward the best interests of all concerned.

1967-1968 HICKORY SCHOOL BOARD MEMBERS: Charles E. Jeffers, Chairman, Thomas H. Shores, Mrs. J. E. Barringer, E. M. Fennell, Dr. W. E. Leonard, Theodore R. Brewer, Gene D. Smith.

TRANSFERRING THOUGHTS to paper, Mr. William G. Barker, assistant superintendent of schools, Mr. Harold E. Hewitt, business manager, Mr. Gene Milier, H.H.S. principal, and Dr. J. H. Wishon, superintendent of schools, plan the new high school.

Pink slips, check-out cards, and college applications were familiar items to three vital staffs at Hickory High—office, guidance, and library. Fully-armed with pen, permits, and patience, the office workers, Mrs. Phyllis Shuford, Secretary; Assistant Principal Troy Washam; and Treasurer Mrs. Louise Gadd battled phone calls and excuses for absence and tardiness. Supplying students with the latest books was the main task of librarians Mrs. Mary Willis and Mrs. Joan Andrews. By selecting, ordering, and recommending new books, they kept students up-to-date on new achievements. Serving as adviser, as psychologist, and as substitute parent, the three guidance counselors made school life less hectic. Mr. William Coyne, new to the department this year, joined veterans Mrs. Kathryn Havnaer and Mrs. Frances Turpin to advise and aid the largest enrollment in the history of Hickory High School.

Seniors Inventory Past Experience, Anticipate Future

Kathy Flowers
Secretary-Treasurer

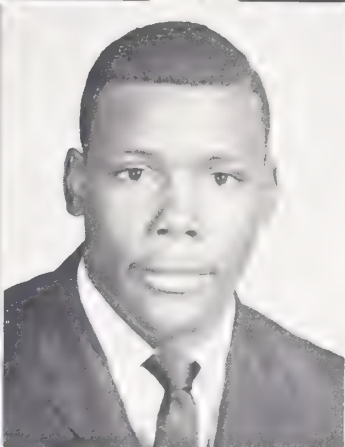

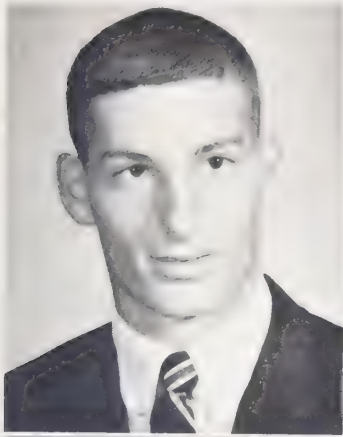

Confronted with the responsibility of positions of leadership and trust, seniors faced a year of anticipation and expectation. In addition to new privileges, they received the respect, honor, and admiration from the underclassmen. By heading staffs, clubs, and organizations, upperclassmen found that along with glory as leaders came much work. Strenuous studying became even more important with college impending. Application blanks and reference sheets were obtained from various colleges and universities to be completed and returned. The wait for answers then became a source for both tension and anticipation. While practicing graduation ceremonies, they were aware that with experiences of the past twelve years behind them, they were about to embark into the society of adults. Senior week ended, and as graduation came to a close, seniors took a backward look at the mark their class had left on H.H.S.'s history and then turned their thoughts toward the world before them.

Discussing numerous books, mentally battling through equations and exponents, striving for positions on varsity teams, and serving as the vital mechanism behind clubs and staffs, Juniors assumed their unique positions as the middleclassmen of Hickory High. Familiar with hectic schedules, crowded halls, and the fast pace of high school life, Juniors utilized study halls to provide time for their extracurricular activities and their after-school jobs. Their continual dreams of driving a car evolved into stark reality as "driver's training" became a vital element in their lives and activities. However, responsibility re-entered another of their school years as they were faced with the financing of the Junior-Senior Prom. Standardized tests and Merit and College Boards interspersed throughout the year yielded necessary data and information for college entrance. As Junior Marshals were chosen and graduation drew near, Juniors anticipated their climactic year of high school, looming ahead with new challenges and bright opportunities.

Strangeness of Halls and People Creates Bewildering

Mike Collins
President

Wandering through unknown corridors and bringing their own concept of high school life, the largest class in the history of Hickory High battled the tension and anxiety of registration. After settling into a routine, they began to plan for the next three years of academic and social life. With every individual, the ideas and excitement of other school years faded into the past as the present time overtook their lives and they gradually became a part of H.H.S. and its many activities. As usual, the crowded halls and stairways left each one in awe and created a sort of personal mass hysteria. Semesters and final exams made their debut for sophomores who rapidly learned the meaning of the word "dread." As sophomores joined staffs and clubs, supported the home team, slowly gained prestige, and earned the unique satisfaction of tackling each day's schedule, they soon acquired confidence, initiative, and ideals. With these patterns in mind, sophomores looked ahead and planned for near future.

Every man has his price.

These are ours.

And you don't have to figure out how much the extras will add to the price of the Volkswagen you buy. We already figured them in.

By building them in.

Things like heater/defrosters, windshield washers and adjustable bucket seats are part of the car. You can't own a VW without owning them, too. (Things like whitewalls are extra, as you might expect. But we tell you that in the *.)

A Volkswagen won't only cost you less to drive out in. It'll cost you less to drive around in.

VW sedans (even the 65 hp Fastback and Squareback) get up to 27 miles to a gallon. Even the biggest VW, our boxy station wagon, gets up to 23.

They all take oil by the pint. (Even the expensive-looking Karmann Ghia.)

And never cost you a cent for anti-freeze because VW engines are air-cooled.

But if you still don't care to sell out so cheap, there is one way to raise the price of a Volkswagen. Get a sunroof. With the beetle, Fastback or Squareback.

(For no money at all, of course, you can come in and see them all in person.)

Learn to Swim--- 6

1. Everyone wants to learn how to dive and almost everyone wants to learn without smacking himself in the process. The first step is to sit on the edge of a pool or low pier, extend the arms forward, palms down, thumbs locked and simply rock forward and slide in between the knees.

2. Next, kneel on one knee, with the toes of the other foot gripping the edge, extend the arms, look downward and forward under the finger-tips, rock forward and slide in. To come to the surface simply lift the head and look up AFTER you are underwater.

3. Then take a crouching position with both feet fairly close together and your toes gripping the edge. Repeat as before, only this time give a little push with both feet as you tip forward into the water.

4. In the final diving lesson, stand with both feet parallel, knees bent slightly, and repeat as before. This time, as the balance is lost, push gently with both feet and attempt to straighten the body as you enter the water.

EDITOR'S LAST WORD

Hickory High School epitomizes a gamut of emotions: depression, satisfaction, and ecstasy. It is a melting pot of ideas and ideals. This fusion of thought and effort yields the spirit which is manifest in academics, athletics, school spirit, citizenship, activities, truth, and honor. Portrayed in the coat of arms, these facets of daily school life are the qualities which make Hickory High distinct. Complete fulfillment and utilization of potential have not been attained in each area. Therefore, we must recognize these deficiencies and dare to reach for excellence. The 1968 Seniors will soon be gone; we challenge the remaining classes of Hickory High to reach a level of supremacy through learning, competition, and independent thought and exertion.

Long hours and precise teamwork have gone into the various sections of this book, capturing each reflection and recollection of H.H.S. Emerging as a product of these efforts, the Hickory LOG remains as the last tangible evidence of the exuberance of football victories, the romantic spirit of Junior-Senior, and the tearful termination of twelve years for 1968 graduates.
